IS THE HEART RIGHT?

GLENDALE CITIZEN QUESTIONS EVANGELIST'S RIGHT TO JUDGE OTHERS

Glendale, Mar. 11, 1915.
Mr. John E. Brown, Evangelist,
Glendale, California.
Dear Sir:

It was my privilege, if not pleasure, to be present at your meeting Tuesday afternoon, which assembled for the purpose of hearing you hold up to ridicule the faith or belief or doctrine of our Christian Science brothers. Now, it is one of the frailties of human nature, and such an easy thing to do, that any mountebank can perform it, to ridicule a religious belief by the peculiar and what we judge to be very foolish things that its adherents do. For example, any unbeliever can without effort ridicule the parson who prays God to do certain things that it is impossible for God to do, since he is not a capricious being. As for instance, we see our good and wise President Wilson setting aside a day of prayer for peace, and in every holy temple in our land God is asked for peace, and in all the following days these same people who prayed for peace are very, very busy supplying millions of dollars' worth of munitions of war to their brothers who wish to puncture each other full of holes. We do not yet know what prayer is, which is the reason why we make ourselves ridiculous before the eyes of a sane person.

You state that Christian Science is neither science nor Christian. You evidently are not familiar with science literature on the subject of "mind and matter," for authorities hold that matter does not exist except as it exists in the mind of intelligence, that if there was no intelligence there could be no matter. That is what Christian Science teaches, and to that extent their doctrine is in harmony with our foremost scientific thought. It is also the practice of wise doctors to give placebos to such of their patients as are sick with imaginary ills; for they know it to be a fact that all some sick people need is to get their mind off themselves to be cured. That is all that Christian Science teaches, and to that extent it is scientific for it is truth.

But is their doctrine Christian? you ask; and in reply I believe I can truthfully say that there is just as much gospel truth in it as there is in any of the orthodox doctrines. They put the legitimate question to you, "What did Christ mean when he said, 'These things and greater than these ye shall do?'" But in your answer you made reference only to the "greater things" and ignored the equally inclusive "these things." Why did you ignore the latter, which refers to Christ's healing of the sick? Is it because you cannot answer that part of the question on account of your ignorance of the gospel? I might also put the question to you, what did Jesus mean when he said, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free?" Free of what, or from what? Inasmuch as Christ did not limit the phrase to freedom from sin, no one else has authority to set that limitation on his promise.

But you say, "They deny the divinity of Christ and the fact of the Holy Trinity." They probably deny the orthodox conception of Jesus and of the Holy Trinity; and what of it if they do deny that conception? Assuredly it is not a crime to deny some fallible human's conception of an alleged fact. And then you pat yourself and your friends on the back for having sufficient wisdom for being united on the fundamental doctrine of the Holy Trinity, that the only true God is a triune being and a personal God. That is to say, orthodox Christians are united as to one certain fact about God, but in regard to some of the other facts about God they are at variance, else there would be only one church as at the beginning; thus Christianity embraces forty-eleven different Gods, there being one God for each denomination. Let me illustrate what I mean by saying that each church has its own peculiar God. God is manifested to us by what he speaks to us, and he talks to us in the language that we understand or have learned to comprehend. The Baptist God speaks in the Baptist language, the language which the Baptist learned, the language that Baptists comprehend and which no other denomination can understand. The Presbyterian God speaks the Presbyterian language, a language that no Baptist or other believer can understand sufficiently well to accept. And so on all down the line. Now all orthodox churches are united on one fact about God; the same as man is united on the fact that the German, the Englishman, the Irishman, the Frenchman, the Norwegian, are all white; but

THREE DAYS MORE

THE GREATEST REVIVAL EVER HELD IN THIS VALLEY TO SOON COME TO CLOSE

(By Pub. Com.)

Thursday night, Long Beach laymen and Carpenters' Union.

Friday afternoon, sermon-lecture to woman and girls, "The Ideal Woman."

Friday night, school night.

Saturday, at 10 a. m., children's chorus practice; 2:30, children's service and musicale.

Saturday night, big feature.

Sunday afternoon, sermon-lecture to men only, "Chickens Come Home to Roost."

Sunday evening, 7:30, young people's rally.

Special service for women at 6:45 this evening at Baptist church. Mrs. Curry, speaker.

After the big service this evening, at which Brown and Curry will be assisted by the Long Beach laymen's gospel team, but three days will bring the remarkable tabernacle meetings to a close. Much will be crowded into these closing services of special interest. The women's service announced for Friday afternoon, at which Evangelist Brown will deliver his famous address on "The Ideal Woman," and the companion service for men only, Sunday afternoon, subject "Chickens Come Home to Roost," are greatly anticipated and it is advised that those who desire seats get there a little ahead of time.

Few men are accomplishing more good for Christ and his church in the twentieth century than Messrs. Brown and Curry. For many years these consecrated Christian workers have pulled together in the harness and their activities extend beyond the actual sphere of holding revivals. The editing of "World Wide Revival," a religious magazine in which Evangelist Brown's striking sermons appear from time to time and in which the addresses on the "Isms" are soon to be printed, the publication of "World Wide Revival Songs," edited by Mr. Curry, and the organization of a fraternity of evangelists with headquarters at Siloam Springs, Arkansas, are among some of the Brown and Curry ventures in the religious world. The services of these men are in demand from ocean to ocean, and from lakes to gulf, Mr. Waterhouse, their advance agent, being kept steadily on the job preparing the way for the noted evangelists. With the team is Reverend Lord, a brother of deep Christian experience, who is preparing for the mission of evangelism into which he will launch himself in a few weeks. Another faithful member of the Brown and Curry family is Graham Curry, who nightly operates the drum, rendering valuable service to the big chorus and orchestra.

At the afternoon service Wednesday Rev. Smith of Tropico led in an earnest and uplifting prayer. The song service was inspiring.

John 15:7 was used in connection with a very helpful sermon on the necessity, power and conditions of prayer.

Conditions must be met before God will answer prayer.

Pray as you ought to pray and you will live as you ought to live. Spiritual decay commences as soon as you cease to pray. "I cannot explain the philosophy or science of prayer, but I do know the power of prayer.

"If ye abide in me and my words abide in you," expresses the conditions of the prayer life, the life which calls for the complete surrender to Jesus Christ.

The young ladies' banquet at the Baptist church was well patronized and well conducted and much good was accomplished. By actual comparison the young ladies are proud to report a larger number than the young men boasted of at their recent banquet. Sorry for the boys!

A splendid congregation again filled the tabernacle at the evening service. Brother Johnson, the active pastor of the First Methodist church, led in the evening prayer with great feeling and there were visions of the cross of Christ.

Seven young ladies of the West Glendale church favored the audience with a very sweet selection, "The Name We Adore." The effort was much appreciated and the singers did justice to the splendid West Glendale delegation of Methodists and friends. Brother Hartsell looked proud and rightly so.

Once more Evangelist Brown took up the immortal theme of the glad tidings of salvation. Once more Amos of old echoed in the hearts of men his thundering message, "Prepare to meet thy God." Once more dying souls were made to see the importance of being prepared to meet God as the logic of the preacher's sermon battled down the false arguments of the careless and unconcerned.

We should prepare to meet God first, because we shall all some day meet him; second, because at a fearful price God has prepared the way; third, because it is an awful thing to stand in the presence of the living God unprepared.

"You are going and God is coming. Life is but a flash between two eternities."

How many vote for hymn number 132 in "World Wide Revival Songs?" Tell Mr. Curry about it.

CHORAL CLUB TO MAKE SECOND BOW TO THE PUBLIC ON MONDAY EVENING

Everything is shaping up nicely for the Glendale Choral club concert to be given at the high school auditorium Monday evening of next week. The club is to be assisted by three well-known artists as soloists—Miss Lalla Fagge, violinist, a pupil of Caesar Thompson of Brussels and August Wilhelmj of London; Mrs. Leroy W. Bosserman of Glendale, well-known piano teacher, who has studied under such masters as Albert Koch, Victor Heinze and Ottakar Malek; and Mr. Roland Tomkins, a tenor of unusual voice and musical ability.

In the Easter cantata, which is one of the numbers to be given by the chorus, the soloists will be Mrs. C. H. Cunningham, Mrs. Frank Arnold, Mr. Tomkins and Mr. F. W. Burgess.

The rehearsals are moving along smoothly and present indications are that the club will surpass the splendid record made at their first public appearance.

To hear a chorus of fifty voices splendidly trained and under the leadership of such a director as Prof. Poulin, is a treat, indeed, and one that is appreciated by music lovers, judging from the success the members of the club are meeting with in the sale of tickets.

Tickets may be obtained from any member of the chorus and will be on sale at the door Monday night.

REVOLVER THEFT

The latter part of last week a man by the name of Frank Ward stole a revolver from Fred W. Gatz, who occupied a room in the Flower block. The story goes that while Gatz was asleep in his room, the theft was committed, and as Ward was the only person known to be in the room at the time, the suspicion was placed upon him.

Night Marshal C. V. Arrington was called and went in pursuit of the thief, overtaking him while walking out of town. Upon searching Ward, the man suspicioned, the Gatz revolver was found in his pocket. Ward was taken before Police Magistrate J. Whomes and given fifty days in the county jail.

In the meantime, Officer Arrington claims that Gatz offered a reward of $10 for the return of the revolver, which $10 Gatz tendered to the court in the form of a check from Mr. Martin of the Flower block. The check was presented at the bank immediately for payment, but it was found the drawer of the check had ordered payment stopped. The officers then visited the Gatz room and took the revolver as security for the $10 reward offered.

Judge Whomes is of the opinion that the revolver can be held until the $10 is paid, which $10 is to be placed in the police court fund to be turned over to the city.

Chief G. H. Herald says so far as he is personally concerned he would favor returning the revolver, if a man has not sufficient stability to live up to what he agrees to do.

Nature's beauty is more than skin-deep.

TENTH ANNIVERSARY

LOCAL CHAPTER, P. E. O., CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY AND ELECTS OFFICERS

Chapter L, P. E. O., spent a very busy day Wednesday at the home of Mrs. H. E. Bartlett, 101 Brand boulevard, it being election of officers, as well as the tenth anniversary of the chapter.

The morning was devoted to election of officers, who were chosen as follows: Mrs. Pearl Tower, president; Mrs. Caroline Campbell, vice-president; Mrs. Bernice Pulliam, recording secretary; Mrs. Fern Roberts, corresponding secretary; Mrs. May B. Dickman, treasurer; Mrs. J. A. Pirtle, chaplain; Mrs. Ina Randolph, guard; Mrs. Flora Temple, journalist. Mrs. May Chase was elected delegate to accompany the president to the convention at Alhambra in April, and Mrs. Emery and Mrs. Temple were elected alternates.

At noon a delicious luncheon was served, all carried out in the chapter colors, yellow and white. Immediately after lunch the retiring president, Mrs. Eleanor Blackburn, gave an interesting little talk, and the new officers were installed by Mrs. Elizabeth Moyse, first president of Chapter L, after which followed the program, consisting of a toast to the chapter by Mrs. Pulliam, music by Miss Monica Smith, and an interesting guessing contest.

The chapter had as guests for the day Mrs. Baxter from Minnesota and several of the charter members who had moved away, among them being Mrs. Lorbeer, Mrs. McGee and Mrs. Frank Albricht. Each of these ladies spoke a few words to the ladies assembled.

MORRISONS COME TO GLENDALE

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Morrison will be pleased to learn of their recent return to this city to reside. Their son entered Glendale Union high school on Feb. 1 and it is for this reason that they have selected one of the finest residences on North Louise street so as to be near the school.

Mr. and Mrs. Morrison came from New York City, where Mr. Morrison held a responsible position with one of the largest importing concerns of that city. He is a consulting accountant of wide experience and an authority on credit work. He is a member of the editorial staff of The Credit World and an author and writer of credit and business literature, his name being known to every retail merchant of note in this country. Mr. Morrison is director and secretary of one of Los Angeles' most progressive and foremost corporations in the manufacturing and retail line and is one of Glendale's busiest men.

PRETTY OPENING

The millinery parlors of Mrs. Anna L. Smith, 1024 West Broadway, were the rendezvous of many Glendale ladies Wednesday, the occasion being the spring opening, when all the newest, latest and freshest in millinery was on display. The exhibit was complete and the range of styles so complete that every woman found something to please her and many who came only to get a glimpse of the new spring styles found herself deciding that life would not be worth living without some one of the dainty creations that particularly struck her fancy.

This up-to-date and exclusive establishment has an unusually large and attractive display this spring.

OCEAN CABLES

The diameter of the Atlantic cable varies according to the depth of the water, the character of the bottom on which it lies and the probabilities of interference from anchors. It is smallest in midocean depths. There is little or no movement at the bottom, and it is important that the cable should not have great weight. A heavy cable in deep water would be difficult to bring up for repairs if such were needed. In the shallow water a heavier type of cable is used. The types are known as "shore end," "intermediate" and "deep sea." The diameters of the commercial cables are: Shore end, two and three quarter inches; intermediate, one and three-quarter inches; deep sea, one inch.

DAUGHTERS MEET

MRS. LaGROSSE IS HOSTESS TO LARGE DELEGATION OF PATRIOTIC WOMEN

Members of General Richard Gridley Chapter, D. A. R. enjoyed a very delightful meeting at the home of Mrs. H. A. LaGrosse, 216 N. Maryland avenue, Wednesday afternoon. The artistic furnishings of Mrs. LaGrosse's beautiful home were enhanced by decorations of flowers from her own garden, scarlet verbenas and huge bowls of bright hued nasturtiums placed to charming effect lent their beauty and grace.

Mrs. LaGrosse proved herself a royal hostess and the meeting was one worthy of the organization and the principles for which it stands. There was a good attendance and the ladies were delighted with the paper on "Bird Life in California," read by Mrs. W. N. Sarber. Mrs. Sarber gave the same address before the Hollywood D. A. R. and Mrs. LaGrosse persuaded her to repeat it here. She is an enthusiastic student of bird life and the many specimens of stuffed birds with which she illustrated her talk added much to the enjoyment and the understanding of it.

Mrs. Rathbun, chairman of Philanthropic work gave a very good and interesting report. She reported that on Saturday she with other members of the committee delivered to the All Night and Day Nursery in Los Angeles, 50 articles of clothing and 30 toys for the babies. The committee is working all the time for this institution and has interested the Priscilla Club of Glendale in the work and this organization will sew for the babies one afternoon of each month. Other societies are also becoming interested and pupils of the West Glendale school will give their pennies to help buy milk for the babies.

The regent, Mrs. Mary H. Gridley-Braly presided in her usual charming way, Mrs. LaGrosse served dainty and appetizing refreshments and a very pleasant and profitable meeting came to a close.

PRETTY BAD

The barber was very busy, and the shop was full of men waiting for him to practice his tonsorial art upon their heads and faces.

One man, Mr. Blank, became tired of waiting for his turn to come and started to leave. Although his beard had come out pretty heavy, he thought no one would notice it and that he could come back the next morning when Hughes, the barber, was not so very busy. The barber, not wishing a customer to go away unattended to, accosted him by saying, "You're not leavin' us, is you Mr. Blank?"

Mr. Blank felt of his face and replied, "Why I don't need a shave, do I Hughes?"

Hughes thereupon looked his customer over critically and answered him assuredly, "No, youse don't need a shave. All youse needs is a haircut on de face."—National Monthly.

THE WELL-BALANCED MIND

Not every person living is qualified to render a decision on important questions. Prejudice is apt to overcome good judgment in the minds of too many persons to whom is assigned the responsibility of rendering decisions.

The just judge weighs carefully the evidence produced and renders a decision in accordance with the evidence given, being careful not to allow any personal prejudice to influence his decision.

There have been instances wherein two men in a community cannot agree upon any question. What one approves, the other disapproves, neither taking into consideration the merits of the case. The ideal way is to base an opinion on the merits of a case regardless of whether your supposed enemy stands for or against the case in question.

Be broad enough, be big enough, be man enough, to overlook petty prejudices and jealousies and approve or disapprove of a case according to your best judgment and not according to the position your adversary takes upon the question.

This matter of unfairness works an injury in city, school, church and society organizations.

CONSIDERING THE PENALTY

There are in jail in this county a number of the most dangerous criminals. Officers of the law deserve great credit for having apprehended them. There remains the duty, in the absence of acquittal, of naming the penalty. The purpose of a penalty, despite a belief to the contrary, is not that vengence shall be had upon the individual. It is that he shall be deterred from farther offending, and that the manner in which his enforced abstention from evil practices shall be procured, may serve to restrain others. The idea of hanging an assassin is repellent, and so is the thought of applying the knife to the gangrened limb, yet is the surgeon not falsely merciful? He applies the knife.

Several of the blood guilty criminals are anxious to confess. They hesitate only for one reason. Each is afraid of being hanged. To look forward to the prospect of a life within prison walls does not seem to appall, but the thought of death causes them to tremble. They would go to a cell buoyed up by the hope of escape, perhaps through pardon, perhaps by slaying a few guards. Anyway, they do not particularly dread imprisonment. There is in creatures of this type no quality to which appeal can be made, save only the qualities born of fear. Not afraid of penal servitude, the prospect of mounting the gallows is something they do not view with equanimity.

Society is ready to help such as have capacity for being helped. More and more it puts forth efforts to reform the breaker of the law, and if in him there be any good, he appreciates and responds. Here and there are found criminals that are beyond the reach of any method yet devised or conceived. They prey upon society; to do this is their profession, and after following it for years, it comes to be the limit of endeavor possible to them. Then society is asked to feed and house them indefinitely. Society is asked to do this while knowing that the criminals, once loose again, would continue to be its enemy and peril, and while confined, a burden. It seems like asking considerable.—Pasadena News.

CALL OF THE WEST

This is a year in which the people living east of the Alleghanies ought to look westward and try to find out something about the Mississippi valley, the vast mountain areas, and the absence of the Pacific. The people living in the Mississippi valley know the whole country better than those of any other section, and are, indeed, our most national and cosmopolitan Americans. They are less provincial than the people of New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore. But as a rule, they know the east and the Atlantic better than they know the farther west of mountains and the Pacific. And this year they should find themselves drawn towards the Golden Gate. The country itself, with its great natural and scenic features, its developments of agriculture, its new towns and cities, will always furnish the chief attraction for intelligent travelers. But some special occasion, like a world's fair, may very properly stimulate and direct the tourist tide in a given season. California deserves high praise for the sagacity and confidence shown by her in not allowing the European war to cause the postponement of the Panama-Pacific exposition. Her courage will be rewarded.

There cannot, of course, be so large a participation in the enterprise by foreign nations as was expected; and in some ways it will not be possible to give the fair so rounded an international character as had been originally desired. But the undertaking had been magnificently worked out, its attractions will prove all and more than had been hoped for, and the peoples of the western hemisphere may well decide to make California their Mecca this year.

California itself is always a realm of interest and delight to visitors, particularly from the eastern part of the United States, because of its almost inconceivable range of climate, scenery and products, both natural and cultivated. Northward from San Francisco are fertile valleys, lofty mountains and vast forests. Southward are areas of specialized products, particularly on irrigated land. Still further south are the orchards of oranges and other citrus fruits; and in the mild subtropical climate of the Mexican border almost everything possible to grow, wherever water can be supplied. California is a wonderland.—American Review of Reviews.

MOTHERLAND

It is a suggestive fact, and one well worth noting—although we have no recollection of having ever heard attention called directly to it—that the Britons are the only people in the world who speak of the home of their race as the motherland. The Jews were, and are, the "Children of Israel." Palestine was, and is, to them always the "Land of Our Fathers." Rome was "Patria" to her citizens. France is "La Patrie" to her sons and daughters. Germany is distinctively "the fatherland" to all its people. The same is true of every existing nation of importance, so far as we are aware. Even the national hymn of the United States appeals to "Our Father's God." Britain's children reverently think and speak of their motherland.—Halifax Chronicle.

HE WAS ACQUAINTED

"Well," said the visitor, "as you have been living in the neighborhood so many years, I suppose you know all the ins and outs of this place?"

"Oh, yes, sir—at least, I am quite familiar with the inns," replied the caddy.—London Telegraph.

Mr. T. J. Keleher of 228 North Louise street left today for El Centro, where he will probably remain about a week on business.

Mrs. Lena Mackay Jack, Miss Adaline M. Jack and Julian R. Jack, who have spent the past year in San Francisco and northern points of interest are the guests of Dr. Jessie A. Russell of 343 North Maryland avenue.

BIRTHDAY DINNER

Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Weaver of 301 South Kenwood are entertaining with a dinner party today in honor of Mr. Weaver's birthday. The guests are Dr. and Mrs. Stoddard of Pasadena, Mrs. Carrie Wright of Schuyler, Neb., and Mrs. Herbert Granger of Hotel Gray, Glendale.

MRS. MANSON CELEBRATES HER BIRTHDAY

Mrs. Manson, mother of Mrs. J. N. McGillis, who makes her home with the McGillis family, 205 Lomita avenue, celebrated her seventy-sixth birthday Wednesday and in honor of the event entertained two dear friends at luncheon. Mrs. S. J. Fambrough, 77 years of age, a schoolmate of Mrs. Manson's 59 years ago in Georgia, was one of the guests, and Mrs. Gasser, aged 82 years, mother of Mrs. T. A. Wright, was the other.

Had they been girls of sixteen, these three could not have enjoyed more the good things which Mrs. McGillis had prepared for the occasion, nor the daintiness of the luncheon table, with its centerpiece of violets. With happy chatter and gossip and reminiscenses of by-gone days the time passed quickly and the hour came all too soon for the guests to bid Mrs. Manson good-bye and wish her many, many more happy returns of the birthday anniversary.

NORTH GLENDALE

Mrs. Archie Parker of South Louise street entertained as her guest the first part of the week her aunt, Mrs. M. H. Williston, and friend, Mrs. Jane Ford of Manchester, Iowa, who came up from San Diego last Monday, where they spent a week viewing the exposition and who are now stopping in Los Angeles.

Friends of Mrs. Edward Gibson of Valley View road will be glad to hear that she has recovered from the severe illness that has confined her to the bed for the past month, and is now able to go out among her many friends again.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dowe and four children of Bellflower motored to North Glendale recently and were guests for the day of Mrs. Dowe's brother, Mr. Lucius F. Drake, and family of 1657 Ruth street.

Mrs. M. E. Brown of 908 Dryden street entertained at a beautifully appointed dinner party recently several young men students of Occidental college, among whom were her three nephews.

Mrs. S. E. Green of 910 Dryden street entertained as her house guest for the mid-week Mrs. M. Gross of Los Angeles.

Mrs. J. W. West of 1333 Valley View road spent Monday in Los Angeles, where she was the guest of Mrs. Frank Gardiner at a prettily appointed luncheon.

Mrs. L. H. Wadsworth of 1017 Fairview avenue, with her daughter, Miss Ruth, spent the early part of this week in Compton, where they were house guests of W. T. Swank of that place.

THE CANNY SCOT

(By Mary A. Clarke Colquhoun of South Pasadena.)

It is said that it takes two Jews to outwit a Greek, and three Greeks to outwit an Armenian. How many Armenians would be required to outwit a canny Scotchman the legend sayeth not, but I know of one unlettered Scotch lassie who has proved herself more than a match for the entire postoffice department of the city of Los Angeles.

A short time ago I went to the postoffice here to get a cairngorm which I had ordered as a gift for my Scotch husband. The inspector who appraised the stone admired it, also, and was interested to learn that it is found only in Scotland, and is greatly loved by her loyal sons.

"I can see," he remarked, holding the pendant off and looking at it approvingly, "how a Scotsman would send any distance for a beautiful thing like that, but can you tell me why anyone should send to Scotland for a pair of common heavy woolen socks?"

The question was a poser, and I replied: "No, I cannot," adding "but I have heard my husband speak of wearing such socks in 'the old country' when he was a boy."

"Oh," said the inspector, "I can understand wearing them in a country as cold as Scotland, but why anyone should want them in a climate like this is beyond me. But they are coming all the time, and the recipients seem immensely pleased to get them."

"Perhaps some Scotch mother thinks her laddie will be cold in this far-away land," I said, "and perhaps the sight of his mother's handiwork pleases the home-loving man," and taking up my cairngorm I left the office.

A little later, having purchased some things in a store, I began to spell my name for the shop girl, as I always do for strangers because there is so little connection between the spelling and the pronunciation. I had gotten as far as "C-o-l—q-u-" when the girl looked up and said, laughing:

"You needn't spell it for me; I'm Scotch myself."

"Ah," I said, "then you will be glad to see something that I received this morning," and I opened up before her round, blue eyes my cairngorm.

After it had been enthusiastically admired, the girl looked at the box, with a perplexed expression, and she asked: "Did it come through the postoffice—just so?"

"Yes," I said.

"Then you had to pay duty on it," she half declared, half inquired.

"Certainly," I replied.

Then, in a ringing voice and with a look of commiseration for me, she announced: "You are not half so clever as I."

Naturally I demanded to know wherein my inferiority consisted. To make a somewhat-drawn-out story short, it appeared that this girl's lover came to the United States two years before she did, and that she frequently sent him gifts through the mail.

"And I paid no duty," she added, in a manner to make me feel that a college education is a poor substitute for the qualities which she had displayed.

"Of course you did not," I said, determined not to show my humiliation; "he had to do that here."

"Not a bit of it," she declared, triumphantly.

"How did you manage?" I asked, very meek by this time.

Then she proceeded to enumerate the clever devices by which she had outwitted the postoffice authorities: "And the last thing I sent," she remarked in conclusion, "was a pair of gold cuff-links, and I sewed each one of them in the heel of a woolen sock."

MODESTY OF BACH

From the time when Bach was so fortunate as to receive the appointment of organist at Arnstadt, with an annual salary of $70 to $80, his desires were apparently fulfilled. He sought for no higher post, and only when a new one was offered him did he accept it thankfully as a gift of Providence. In every new position it was his only aspiration to do his duty faithfully, and accordingly he made his gifts serve his place, so that as an organist he composed organ pieces; as the Weimar chapelmaster psalms and sacred cantatas, and chamber music, and as the musical director of the St. Thomas school his great polyphonic, difficult vocal works. Kings and princes not infrequently commanded him to play to them. He did their will modestly, and, fully satisfied, returned to his simple home. He must have known that he was the greatest organ virtuoso in the world and at that time a great master of this instrument was well rewarded. He was highly esteemed in France, England and Holland, but was never known to express the wish of setting his foot on foreign soil.—Johann Friedrich Rochlitz.

The neighborhood terror! He or she who purposely spreads abroad the error. Lord knows that all of us stumble on the way; all of us make mistakes. All of us get gay. What's the use of writing down all the little slips? Better far forget them—better close the lips.

If a bad habit or a bad impulse is given no exercise, it soon will wither away and die.

IF EVERYBODY SHOULD PLANT SOMETHING

Before an investigating committee in New York the other day, the president of the Chicago Board of Trade, the greatest produce exchange in the world, gave it as his opinion that if there were no interference with shipments of grain to Germany—if German orders might be filled in addition to those from all other quarters in Europe—wheat would now be selling for $2 a bushel. All the world is looking to America for foodstuffs, not entirely for immediate consumption, but very largely with a view to the future. In Europe millions of acres have been withdrawn from cultivation; millions of workers have been withdrawn from the farms. The bread-stuff yielding area of all countries affected by the war—and this statement applies to those that are in a state of readiness only, as well as to those actually involved as belligerents—will be tremendously reduced this year. The demand on the products of nations beyond the zone of disturbance, the nations of the American continents, for instance, will be proportionately increased.

It is seen by intelligent observers of the situation that if prices of foodstuffs could not be held down with an average crop in Europe and a record crop in the United States in 1914, they cannot be prevented from soaring higher in 1915, with the crop of Europe a negligible quantity, save by such an increase of production on this side as will compensate for loss on the other. The complete opening of the passage through the Dardanelles and the Sea of Marmora would undoubtedly result in liberating immense quantities of Russian grain, but the effect of this, unless the war came to an end, would be only temporary. For anything like permanent relief from a food shortage the world must look to increased production in America, and especially in the United States and Canada.

Already steps have been taken in these two nations greatly to increase their cultivated areas. Canada is working toward the planting of wheat on a more extensive scale than ever. The difficulty in marketing cotton, and the educational campaign carried on in the South during recent months, may be confidently expected to result in a wide departure in that section from the unwise single crop system. This year's high prices are certain to encourage farmers in all other parts of the country to increase their planted acreage.

But neither Canada nor the United States should throw all the responsibility or place all their dependence on the farmers properly so-called. Everybody within reach of a plot of ground, no matter how small, in front yard or back yard or side yard, should this year raise something that will add to the sum of the world's food supply. There should be no idle lots by the roadside in the country, by the street side in the hamlet, village, town or city. The soil is ready to yield bountifully to feed the millions abroad that are threatened with hunger, and the labor it calls for should be provided cheerfully and plentifully. If the idle farms and the idle lots, the land that is going to waste on every side within the borders of the North American republic, were cultivated this year, the United States alone could feed the world.

Let an army of American men, women and children be mobilized for this grand object and it will go far more than a little way toward repairing the harm that is being done by the armies of destruction mobilized elsewhere. Everybody, broadly speaking, is eligible to enlistment in this cause. If everybody does his part, small or large, there will, we believe, be no cry for bread throughout the wide earth this year or next year to which the people of the United States cannot promptly and generously respond.—Christian Science Monitor.

HIS SPECIALTY

Surely this is a day of specialization, remarks the Lawrence, Kans., Journal. During a recent campaign a man approached a candidate and stated that for a small consideration he would be willing to work for his election.

"What can you do?" he was asked.

"Why, sir," said the man, "I can start more lies on your opponent than he and his friends can explain away during all the rest of the campaign. When it comes to starting lies on a candidate, I acknowledge no man as my equal."

NO PLACE FOR A LIAR

"I want to be excused," said the worried-looking juryman, addressing the judge. "I owe a man $25 that I borrowed, and as he is leaving town today for some years, I want to catch him before he gets to the train and pay him the money."

"You are excused," returned his honor in icy tones; "I don't want anybody on the jury who can lie like that."—Toledo Blade.

Every man, every woman, every child has some talent, some power, some opportunity of getting good and doing good. Each day offers some occasion for using this talent. As we use it, it gradually increases and improves and becomes native to the character. As we neglect it, it dwindles, withers and disappears. This is the stern but benign law by which we live. This makes character real and enduring; this makes progress possible; this turns man into angels and virtue into goodness.

IS THE HEART RIGHT?

each one of these men speaks in a language which cannot be understood except by those who have learned that language.

Did we but study the language of the gospel of Christ, and study it alone, with the assistance of the Holy Ghost, until we comprehended it, we, each and all of us, would know the only true God to whom Christ prayed (John XVII) and to whom he asked us to pray; for he would manifest himself to us in the language of Jesus by the spirit of truth, the Holy Ghost. But instead of learning the language of the gospel, and by that language comprehending the will of the only true God, and intelligently doing that will and living in the kingdom of heaven, each orthodox church substitutes its peculiar creed or doctrine for the gospel; so why need you find fault with the Christian Science church for substituting its creed for the Bible? Why do you not obey Christ and extract the beam out of your own eye before attempting to remove the mote from your brother's eye?

Now, inasmuch as there is only one true God, the God whom Christ revealed to us in the gospel, the God who speaks only the language of the gospel to convey to us only one truth, that we must do the will of God to get into the kingdom of heaven; and inasmuch as none of us comprehend that language, not having learned it, and therefore look upon the doing of his will as not possible or practical, for it looks to us like anarchy because we do not comprehend the gospel; and inasmuch as we are all fallible and prejudiced and do foolish and sinful things, it is not becoming in any of us to hold the rest of us, or our doctrines, up to scorn and ridicule. Do you know what I am talking about?

BEING GREAT

Few have pased through a high school course without having written at least one essay on "Greatness." More than likely the title was "True Greatness," and the screed itself devoted to uplifting the lowly through imparting the thought that, getting right down to brass tacks, they really were the great themselves. Poet Edwin Markham, a man charming in his personality and his work, a writer of vision, of whom California is proud, seems to have retained something of the habit of youth, for recently he said: "Any one is great who makes the most possible of the stuff he has at hand to work with." With the utmost respect, issue is taken with the distinguished authority. If his statement were in keeping with human conditions, there would lie within every individual the power of achieving greatness. There are countless faithful, earnest men and women who do the best that is possible, whose one purpose in life is to perform the whole of their duty. Certain qualities must inhere in one that is to attain greatness. In the absence of these qualities, the effort would be hopeless and the ambition vain. Term these people good; exalt their virtues, sing the praise of their tireless endeavor. This is the total of the legitimate reward. The little people who perform the little tasks are essential. They may not rise to the heights, not having been winged for flight. Greatness may seem to come from opportunity alone. There are bounds that the multitude must be unable to pass. Here and there from this multitude arises one to sing a deathless song, to invent a piece of mechanism affecting the nations, to defeat disease, to transmit the voice across a continent, in a word, to become great. Granted that these had made the most of the stuff at hand—they had the stuff. The engineer in his cab gets the utmost speed out of his locomotive. No engineer could do more. Yet this man is not called great, unless in some emergency he chances to become a hero. The humble citizen sweeping the crossing may make the most out of his broom, keep the crossing in passable condition, but he does not develop into greatness, unless he discard the broom, and, stimulated by genius, seize a different implement. In this world of the commonplace, as well as of glorious attainment, the majority are equipped with brooms. They are not to lead, but to be led. Their station is fixed far from the eminence. They may be good, but not great.—Long Beach Telegram.

THIS TOWN

This life is what we make it. So is this town.

What this town needs isn't faultfinders, but fault fixers.

The country is growing in population. Is Glendale keeping up?

This town will never grow on money that is sent to some other town.

The man who begins to plan for this town will soon be calling it "my" town.

Glendale had to be started by some one. It has got to be kept going by somebody else.

This town doesn't need boosting any more than any other town, but it needs it just as much.

The pioneers thought this was a good place for a town. Let's make it a poor place for knockers.

After "Billy" Sunday, Philadelphia should not have its blue Monday.
